

Gathering of the Tribes III Senior Prom Reunion! Great Night! Great People! Great Time!

... And Lotsa Cheap, Tacky, Plastic Tiaras!

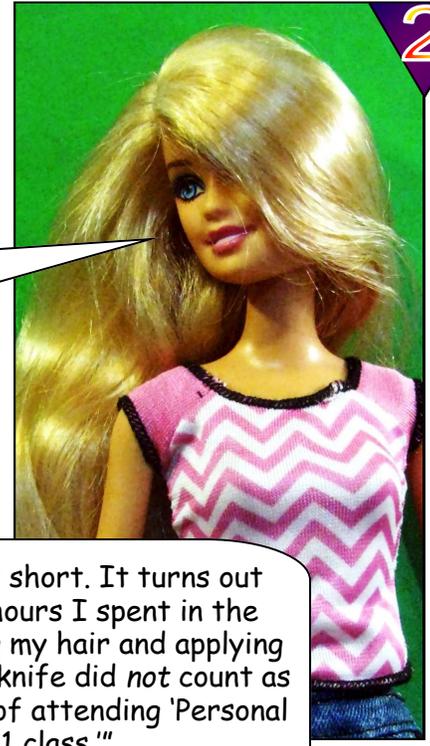

"Hey, all you Jericho cats 'n' kittens! We're ba-a-ack, one last time!"

"And, boy, do we have exciting news to share! Let's split the peas, Barbie!"

"We both flunked outta high school!!!"

"Afraid so. In May, we each received a letter from our old school, Contact High, regretfully informing us that we never actually graduated. Seems they found our transcripts stashed behind a file cabinet that hadn't been opened since 1969. I told Ken to bury 'em behind the bleachers ...

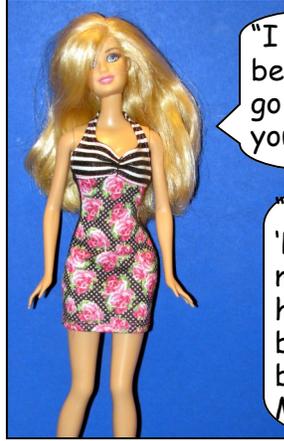

Beans! The expression is "spill the beans," you big, hunky, but clueless dope ..."

"I'm only three credits short. It turns out that the hundreds of hours I spent in the girls' bathroom teasing my hair and applying makeup with a plaster knife did not count as life experience in lieu of attending 'Personal Hygiene and Sex Ed 101 class.'"

"But Ken's flunking out was, like, epic! He didn't pass a single class, making him the world's oldest high school freshman. Heck, Robbie Cano will have played out his ten-year contract with the Seattle Mariners before Ken finally graduates!"

"I kept telling Ken he'd better stop cutting school to go surfing every day, but do you think he listened?"

"Well, that old surfer dude 'Beach Leech' McGillicuddy told me that if the principal saw me hang ten on one of those gnarly, bitchin' waves at Laguna, he'd be so stoked that he'd pass me! Man, dude freakin' lied!"

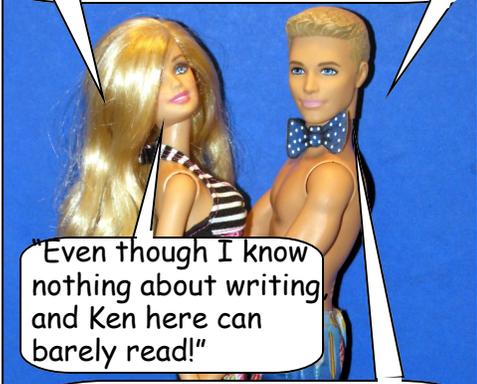

"Whatever. Anyway, after all these years, we had to go back to school. But we sure weren't going back to Contact High. What a dump! I found out about this Jericho High School, on Long Island, one of the highest-ranked schools in the country. But more important, it's within ten miles of Prada, Hermès, Gucci, and Tiffany at the Americana Manhasset! Daddy was able to enroll me 'n Ken as exchange students from Beverly Hills!"

"Yeah, right—'exchange students.' What she means is that in exchange for JHS accepting us, her rich developer dad agreed to build the town, at no cost, an underground bullet train from the high school to the public library, cutting the commute from five minutes by car to just ten seconds! That's more studying time for Jericho scholars!"

"So now Babs and I are students at Jericho High, just like you used to be! And even though we're, like, forty years older than the rest of the student body, the two of us are blending in seamlessly with the other kids. In fact..."

"We joined the school paper, the Jer-Echo!"

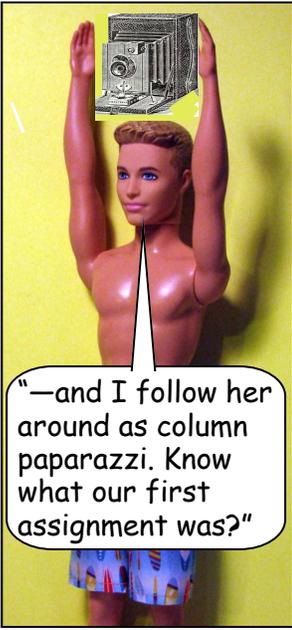

"Even though I know nothing about writing and Ken here can barely read!"

"I realize I can barely read, but from your tone of voice, I'm guessing that you just said something nasty about me ..."

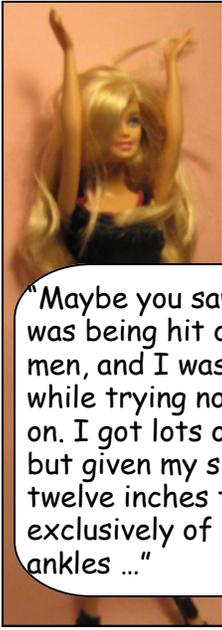

"I'm the Jer-Echo's brand-new society columnist—"

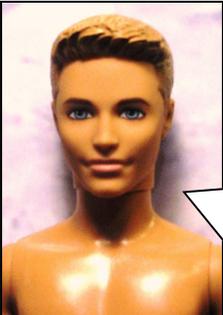

"—and I follow her around as column paparazzi. Know what our first assignment was?"

"Your Gathering of the Tribes III Senior Prom Reunion Party!"

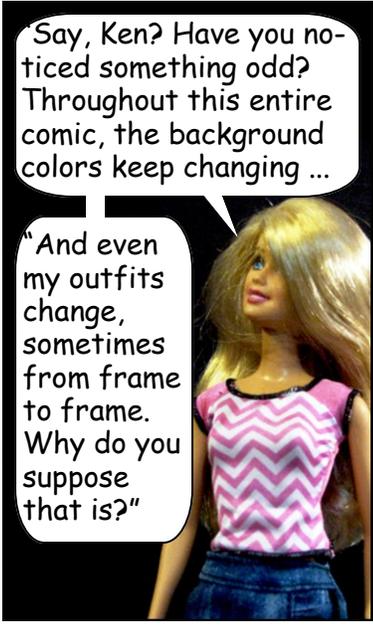

"Maybe you saw us there. Babs was being hit on all by all the men, and I was taking photos while trying not to get stepped on. I got lots of great shots, but given my short stature—twelve inches tall—they're exclusively of people's feet and ankles ..."

"Truth is, no one on the staff wanted to cover it. I quote: 'Watch a bunch of old people socialize, drink too much, and lose their inhibitions? Ew, gross!'"

"But since the kids on the paper were all stressed out about studying for finals, they left most of the issue to us. So it's devoted largely to your reunion party!"

"Say, Ken? Have you noticed something odd? Throughout this entire comic, the background colors keep changing ..."

"And even my outfits change, sometimes from frame to frame. Why do you suppose that is?"

"Gee, Barbie, I dunno. Like you, Mattel didn't make me with a brain. But could it be that the nice man who bought us accidentally left us at the Homestead the night of the big party, so that he had to use old photos he took of us? Which would mean one of two things, neither of which is particularly comforting ..."

"One, we're currently lying discarded under tons of moldy Pampers and rusty tuna cans at the Oyster Bay Land-fill ..."

"... Or two, we're sitting on a shelf in the all-pink bedroom of that sweet, attractive waitress who was admiring us all night ..."

I think I'm gonna be sick ...

"Would you mind giving us some alone time, so we can ponder our sorry fates? Go read the new issue of the Jer-Echo, beginning on the next page."

Editor's Note, by Sue Sheff (JHS '15)

Old JHS Alumni Have A Reunion — We're Supposed to Care?

As this final issue of the 2014-15 school year was going to press, a bunch of old geezers who went to Jericho High School back when it was nothing more than a circus tent with some space heaters for warmth—or something like that—had a reunion weekend.

Sounds b-o-r-i-n-g to us. But what with finals, regent exams, and all, we left most of this issue to two new and suspiciously old-looking exchange students at JHS (Pssst! The two of them could be narcs—pass it on!), Barbie Carson and Kenneth Roberts. They felt it was newsworthy.

Whatever. All six Ivy League schools I applied to accepted me, so what do I care, right? Now where's that Siemens Competition Award-winning bong I made in robotics club? I'm outta here.

Photos by Phil except where noted. Thanks to the following shutterbugs for their contributions: Lorraine Alessi ('75), Fred Balmages ('65), Richard Block ('75), Caryn Buchner Coville ('74), Bonnie Colgan Kosonovich ('73), Abby Goldstein Feilich ('75), Robin Kinberg Levitan ('75), Dianne Oliva ('74), Marci Oppenheim Davidman ('77), Nick Pellicoro ('68), Carol Rosenblum Levin ('73), Jodi Schechter Denenberg ('77), Bruce Steiner ('68), Shari Strongin ('76), Jane Tomasello Peck ('73), Scott Yanofsky ('75).

The Joint Starts to Fill Up -- And So Do the Partyers ...

Cheryl Goldenberg ('72) with Howard Wertheimer ('75), who'd flown up from Atlanta. As you can see, Cheryl proudly wears the cheap, tacky, plastic tiara that everyone—men included—were invited to wear.

Why a tiara? Well, for starters, it's a senior-prom-themed reunion, duh. But also, if you grew up in Jericho, the chances are good that you were treated like a little prince or princess. Heck, wearing a tiara is practically your birthright!

Three other early arrivals were Bonnie Colgan Kosonovich ('73), who came all the way from Michigan, and her bother, Robert Colgan ('70), and his wife, Ann. Bob attended Jericho schools through junior before transferring. According to him, sportscaster Bob Costas was in his kindergarten class.

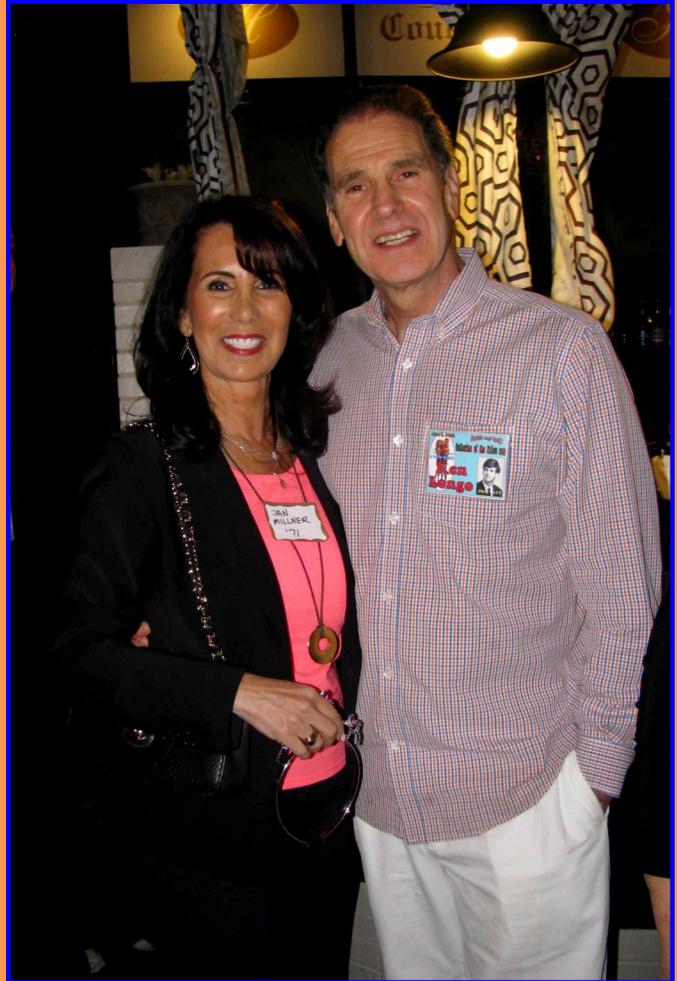

A bunch of folks from the class of 1968 came early for dinner. At left, we have Paul Katz, John Molina, and Terry Drucker, plus the class of 1972's Amy Lubow (who deserves some kind of school-spirit award for having made it to all eight JHS reunions we've thrown since 2002). And on the right are Nick Pellicoro, Dolores "Dee" D'Acierno Mason, Joe Pinto, and Grace Andresini.

Meanwhile, more than sixty members of the JHS class of 1965 came early for a private dinner party celebrating their fifty-year reunion before joining the rest of us at the Senior Prom. Here is Patricia Rogers Russell with her husband, Patrick Russell. The Russells live in Colorado.

Mary D'Amore Prudente ('74), being escorted by husband Don, deserved a purple heart as well as a tiara, attending the reunion despite having broken her foot that week. Although you can't see her boot cast here, rest assured that it was tres fashionable.

Looking great are Jan Millner and Ken Longo, from the class of 1971 (above), and ditto for the class of 1975's Linda DiBari and Ellen Meister (below).

The class of 1970's Cathy Brown Maccarone and Deborah Johnn Vassar rockin' their tiaras.

Teachers' Corner

Keeping Tabs on the Guardians of the Grades

Reported by faculty correspondent
Wang Chung (JHS '16)

Mr. David A. Peccadillo, the respected veteran computer-science instructor, was made to sit in a desk facing the wall in a corner of the computer lab and to write the letter A over and over again for the entire week of May 27, as penance for having given a Jericho High sophomore (name withheld) an A- and not an A.

Numerous lawsuits are pending. In a quavering voice, his handcuffs jangling, Mr. P. pledged in front of the JHS Student Supreme Court at a schoolwide assembly in the auditorium that he will never repeat his egregious mistake. "I don't know how I forgot that Jericho students don't get A-minuses," he said meekly, "only A's."

"But now that I'm allowed to go home at night again," he added, "would you please return my car to me and unfreeze my bank account? Enough is enough." He nodded vigorously, though, when Chief Justice Brad Silvergold (JHS '15) asked Mr. P. sternly if he understood that a future violation would land him in a different Jer-Echo column: "Teachers' Coroner." Only time will tell.

Former neighbors from Clinton Lane in West Birchwood, Roxanne Litt Berlin and Cheryl (now Shari) Goldberg, both JHS 1977. "We used to play together in the 'big, scary woods' before the service road was build," Roxanne recalls.

Your reunion committee believes strongly in gender equality, as demonstrated here by handsomely tiara-ed Terry Drucker ('68), who drove down from Cambridge, Massachusetts.

JHS Better Halves

We had eight (count 'em!) JHS couples on hand*

Meryl Ross Fischer and Danny Fischer are both from the class of 1970. And what are the odds of this: younger sister Laurie Ross ('73) also married someone from her class: Fred Schneider.

Great to see Beth Broadwin Belkin ('74) and Dr. Robert Belkin ('72). Reassuring, too, since Bob is a cardiologist. With a crowd this rickety, it's comforting to have someone on premises who knows how to fire up a defibrillator.

Steven Wainick ('75) and Sandy Peterson Wainick ('78).

Joanne Stahl Sandiford ('71) and Richard Sandiford ('69).

Actually, we had eleven couples, if you count these three from the class of '65: Andrew Genna ('65) and Anita Torre Genna ('65), Arian West Modansky ('65) and Michael Modansky ('64), and Karen Smiley Pollack ('65) and Neil Pollack ('63).

JHS Better Halves

David Fischbein ('69) and Sandi Chertok ('72).

Manny Scarpinato ('68) and Estelle Oliva ('70).

Great shot of Tom Navarra ('72) and Andrea Minsky ('71), who live in Haverstraw, New York.

(Left) Here we have four beautiful princesses (queens?) from the class of '73, two from each coast. On the left, Sharon Chalkin Feldstein and Beth Stewart, both in from California. And on the right, Carol Rosenblum Levin, who lives in Manhattan, and Lisa Stewart Jacobs of Long Island. B-I-I-n-g!

Surely you recognize Doug Baumoel ('74) and Peter Green ('73), second and third from left. But who are the smiling folks next to them? Damned if we know. They're a bunch of Homestead regulars who undoubtedly were starstruck upon learning that Doug and Peter attended Jericho High School. "You went to Jericho?" gasped the two blondes, swooning noticeably. "Can we have our picture taken with you?" I think it goes without saying that all JHS grads are used to such fawning attention wherever we go, and so Doug and Peter consented graciously.

We love it when people who moved away from Jericho before graduating come to JHS reunions. Jo-Anne Goldbaum Maccariello ('75), with husband Jerry Urtnowski, came from Plantation, Florida, to reconnect with old pals. She lived in Jericho until tenth grade.

Four from the class of 1975: Howard Wertheimer, Shelley Steinberg Carleton, Joanne Kassimir, and Ada Kranz Greenberg.

Marci Oppenheim Davidman ('77) and, from the class of '74, Caryn Buchner Coville. Both live on the island.

Scoreboard: JHS Students' IPO$

By Craig Street (JHS '16)

Congratulations are in order for the four latest JHS students to take their companies public in the month of May, bringing the total for 2014-15 to 234: Jeremy Sheckel (JHS '17), Joseph Fuocobutta (JHS '16), freshman Jerry Attrick ('18), and senior Rama Lama Ding Dong ('15, pictured).

Rama, who will be attending MIT this fall, sold his start-up, the cheekily named Teenage MegaMogul, Ltd., to a venture capital group from Thousand Oaks, California, for a reported $28.4 million. While in middle school, he invented the wildly successful MC Zoomba!, a repurposed Roomba robotic vacuum targeted to young affluent Millennials who are throwing bacchanalian Tom-Cruise-in-Risky-Business-level home parties for their friends while Mom and Dad are in Barcelona for the weekend.

MC Zoomba! comes loaded with more than 10,000 pirated songs – from old-school hip-hop, to gangsta rap, to electronic dance music; in other words, the entire spectrum of popular music – to “get your party started.” Its synthesized voice, not unlike that of Sir Stephen Hawking’s, exhorts partygoers to “Shake. Your. Tibia. Bone. And. Wave. Your. Extremities. In. The. Air. Like. You. Just. Feel. Ambivalent!” Etc. While it dishes up exciting entertainment, the disc-shaped gadget patrols your house, vacuuming up broken glass, puke, spilled alcohol, pills, cigarette butts, and, of course, adolescent tears, from the inevitable emotional breakdowns after one too many Jell-O shots: “Everybody here hates me! They say they like me, but they’re lying! I hate them! Phonies! I hate everyone here! ...”

Anyway, we wish you the very best, Rama. And, dude, if we hit you up for a little extra cash on the cafeteria lunch line, we trust that you will be mucho generous!

Oh, What a Night

It was a truly gorgeous evening, and so gradually the party shifted to the Homestead's outdoor courtyard. We always have great weather at our reunions, and that's no coincidence. A few days prior to the party, we sacrifice a current Jericho High School senior, abducted randomly from Broadway Mall—you probably knew it as Mid-Island Plaza—to appease the great volcano god Scungilli. Most kids today are so preoccupied with their cell phones, it's surprisingly easy! They usually don't notice anything is up until they feel the blazing heat from the molten lava. You're welcome.

JHS Student Events For June

Important Announcement! Prom Changed to Virtual Prom

Because all work and no play enables Jack to land a six-figure starting salary right out of college, the senior prom scheduled for Saturday night, June 13, at the Plaza Hotel in Manhattan has been cancelled.

Instead, students are invited to set up their computer webcams and log onto www.jhs.virtualprom.com beginning at 8:00 p.m., for an epic cray-cray party! This way we can pretend to interact while secretly texting below eye level—and without wasting too much valuable study time!

Feel free to pimp out your desktop or laptop with streamers and/or balloons for a festive atmosphere, stock up on plenty of munchies, and be sure to raid Mom and Dad's liquor cabinet!

DJ "Big Mac McScrilla" (Howie Meyerson, JHS '16) will supply the cool sounds via his iPod. If the music makes you feel like dancing, suppress that impulse immediately! What are you, a derp? Nobody ever got into Stanford or Yale 'cos they could do the "Booty Dew" or the "Harlem Shake." We look forward to seeing you—okay, not exactly seeing you—online on June 13.

(Left) We get famous people at our reunions. Honest! See that hand poised over David Carol ('76), Shari Weinstock Davis ('75), Michael Sammis ('75), and Roxanne Litt Berlin ('77)? You know who it belongs to? (Hint: Look at the ring.) Keith Richards! Typically, his other hand was busy gripping a bottle of Jack Daniels while simultaneously sucking the tar out of a cigarette butt.

(Right) Shelley Block ('75) and Philip Bashe ('72) hadn't seen each other since 1972, when she was one of about a half dozen ninth-grade girls in a "rap group" led by Phil, then a sophisticated senior. Which raises an important question: Who considered it a good idea to have a seventeen-year-old guy dispense life advice and assorted "wisdom" to a bunch of fourteen-year-old girls?

JHS Super Sibs

(Above) Sisters Anne Gruber ('69) and Jill Gruber ('72). Anne lives in New York, while Jill was in town from California.

(Above) Sure, some people brought their evil twins to the party, but only two bona fide twins attended: the class of '73's Lisa Stewart Jacobs and Beth Stewart. Funny that they graduated the same year; wouldn't it be a wild coincidence if they had the same birthday too!?!

(Below) Debbie Vascellaro-Lang ('75), Diane Fils Drake ('82)—Nineteen eighty-two? Better check her I.D. to make sure she's old enough to drink—and Rosemary Roseto Traube ('75). Diane's older sister Linda Fils ('69) also joined the party.

It sure can't be easy being Roy Fiorino ('71). What do we mean? Well, how would you like it if half the female population of the JHS class of 1973 insisted on having their pictures taken with you? First (above left) there's Jane Tomasello Peck ... Then before you can even go back to sipping your beer, you're asked to pose with Jane and Lisa Stewart Jacobs and Beth Stewart (above right). Done for the night? You would think so, but NO! YOU'RE NOT. At right we have Roy and Virginia Ferrante Cammareri. Roy's a pro, though, graciously sucking it up and putting on his game face every time. No siree, sure wouldn't wanna be in Roy's shoes. Nope ... nope ... uh-uh ...

(Left) People come from far and wide to get their Jericho-people fix. Great to have Kim Peters ('75) fly in from Texas, and Sandy Sattler ('77), who lives in Colorado.

Sandra, the mother of an adult daughter with developmental disabilities and physical issues, became a renowned attorney with a practice that specializes in Issues of vital importance to people with special needs and their loved ones, such as gaining essential services, guardianships, special needs trusts, and so on. In 2010, she was inducted into the Jericho High School Alumni Hall of Fame.

Justin, then eighteen, happened to attend that year's ceremony with his father, Philip Bashe ('72), and found her acceptance speech, in his words, "extremely inspiring." So he was excited to learn that Sandra would be at the Gathering of the Tribes III Senior Prom Reunion at the Homestead. Upon being introduced to Sandra, he told her how meaningful her words had been to him, as someone with autism, and the two of them had an instant rapport.

The next day, Sandra emailed to say, "It was a lovely evening, the highlight of which was having an opportunity to talk with Justin. Tell him I said hi, and I look forward to future reunions."

It was just one highlight among many on a truly magical night.

Still standing amazingly, after two consecutive nights of reunion parties, from the class of '75, are Lori Gordon Fitzgerald, Artie Monk, and Gloria Rothstein.

Rosemary Roseto Traube ('75), Lori Kroll LoSchiavo ('75), one of the organizers of her class's 40th reunion, David Carol ('76), and Shari Weinstock Davis ('75).

Those three innocent letters have a hold on me.

I can't eat.

I can't sleep.

I haven't gone to the bathroom in more than a week.

Because I must study until my white matter turns muddy.

*I hope I don't crack, or have a heart attack,
or have to be airlifted to a hospital in a Medivac.*

I'd like to learn more than just what's in Common Core.

*And it's really starting to

*I hope I get a grip before
I'm on 15 different varieties of medication for anxiety.*

*But poetry allows me to be free
And not to obsess
about that frigging test.
Soon one day,
I'll be able to say,
"I'm done with you!"

(Below) That's Neil Smilowitz ('68), with some woman, not from Jericho, who'd heard a rumor that surviving members of the Grateful Dead were going to play a short set on the Homestead's stage. "They never showed up! Damn hippie bastards!" she snarled. There's just no pleasing some folks.

Virginia Ferrante Cammareri ('73) seems to be urging Steve Visalli ('76) to simmer down now!

Amazingly, Justin Bashe doesn't appear humiliated by the fact that his father, Philip Bashe ('72), plays with Barbie dolls—in public, even!

Or at Least Until the Fat Lady Sings -- Or Orders Onion Rings at 2:00 A.M.

A bunch of folks went out to local diners afterward, and we have photos of that too. (Fortunately, though, none of those horrible "Here's my food on the plate" close-ups that people like to post.) Thanks for sparing us!

Extracurricular Activities: JHS Tour

The morning of the reunion, something like three dozen alumni were given a guided tour of Jericho High School by Ms. Lois Smith.

Remember the Little Theater? Alumni congregated there—the auditorium was off-limits due to a recent roof collapse. See what happens? We graduate, and the whole place goes to hell!

Just like old times, these seven from the class of '75 were hauled by their ears into this room for afternoon detention. Going around, from front left to front right: Rosemary Roseto Traube, Larry Kass, Debra Tuccillo Kenney, Abby Goldstein Feilich, Shari Morrow Levy, Richard Block, and Steven Grill. They were eventually let out, but with notes placed in their permanent records!

Extracurricular Activities: Sunday Picnic

About a dozen folks turned up on a gorgeous Sunday afternoon for a casual picnic in front of Jericho High School. We almost didn't get permission from the district's buildings-and-grounds department, which would have preferred that we congregate in the back of the school. But when I explained to the woman there that the average age of our group was sixty-plus, and that we were all physically incapable of causing any kind of mischief, she laughed and said, "Aw, go ahead." Thanks, nice lady!

Until next year's Gathering of the Tribes IV, cheers and a fond adieu (or as the French say, fondue), from your tireless reunion committee.

"Hey, it's me: old, bedraggled adult Ken. They asked me to come out here and bring down the curtain on this 'Senior Prom Reunion' business, what with Barbie and the younger hunky version of me having gone missing—either buried in the Oyster Bay landfill or perched on a shelf in the bedroom of one of the Homestead waitresses ..."

"... Now, some people have insinuated that I had something to do with their disappearance. Granted, I'm still sore at Barbie for divorcing me* sixteen years ago. And it's also true that I resent young, virile, studly Ken for his chiseled Aryan good looks, six-pack abs, and sinewy, muscled arms ..."

"And I will concede that it's a bit ... suspicious for me to be standing here in the Florida Everglades, drenched in blood, and using a dinner fork to dig two doll-sized graves.

"Yes, people could look at this and think that I murdered the two of them in a fit of bitterness and jealousy. At least, that's the theory of a certain Sergeant Detective Hollihan, who has warned me that he's going to follow me to the ends of the earth in order to bring me to justice. But hear this, Hollihan—and all you people from Jericho ..."

"I don't know nothing about nobody no how. And I know my legal rights. You'll never pin this on ol' Kenny boy!

"Now, I gotta finish diggin', so I'm signing off for the last time. Hope you enjoyed your reunion party.

"Hey, anyone see where I put that bag of lye?"
